[From the New York Tribune.] Gen. Corcoran-A Sketch of his Military Career.

The telegraph announces the death of Gen. Michael Corcoran on the 22d inst., from injuries caused by the fall of his horse. Gen. Corcoran was born in Sligo, Ireland, in the year 1822. His father, Thomas Corin the post office a short time before his Lincoln's table! departure for the seat of war.

The military career of Col. Corcoran may be dated from the time he united with the gallant 69th as a private in company I (since changed to company A.) His association which that regiment kindled his passion for war, and his diligent performance of his duty, won for him the confidence and esteem of his comrades. He rose rapidly from one position to another, and soon became Captain of the company.

On the 25th of August, 1859, he was electurging them to stand by the flag of the

The effect upon Colonel Corcoran's countrymen was magical. flocked to the standard of their adopted country, and the 69th, with the Colonel at its head, called forth one of the most enthusiastic demonstrations ever witnessed in

The manly bearing and calm dignity of Col. Corcoran won for him the respect of all with whom he associated. The head of the War Department in Washington entertained for him the highest respect, and the sellor and friend.

One of the forts erected to defend the principal avenues from Virginia to the capital bears his name, and will long remain a memento of his courage, energy, and zeal in warding off the blows aimed at the heart of his adopted country.

As night reveals the light of luminaries that shine unnoticed in the glare of day, so the dark season of civil war brings out the best attributes of some men, whose noble traits of character were scarcely known before beyond the radius of their friends and them whenever even the most slight pretext acquaintances. It is eminently so in the offered. case of Gen. Corcoran.

Finally, four or the fight gives the following graphic sketch: Sherman told the bravest of Colonels (Corcoran) to form square. The gallant Col. said. "I have not as many as I would like to do so with, but we'll do the best we can.' The brave and determined Colonel formed us into square, and so we retreated, receiving a fresh flanking fire from our adversa ries as, we went along.
It was while thus exposed Col. Corooran received the wound which led to his capture. For several months he was held a prisoner of war in Richmond, afterward sent to Castle Pickney, and then to Salisbury, in the interior of South Carolina.

During his long and painful imprisonment, he was never known to falter for a moment in his attachment to the Union. No word of complaint escaped his lips. His letters had he fallen into their power? These queshome were imbued with the spirit of hope for the future-and that future will not

He shared his cup and crust with those, who, like himself, were "captives in a strange land," and, always torgetting himself, he ever remembered those who were his fellow prisoners, and exerted his best efforts to seure their speedy release—thus developing the sublime traits of the true soldier and the real hero.

Upon his release from Libby Prison, government appointed him a Brigadier General, dating his commission back to the 21st of July, 1861—the time that he was captured. He immediately proceeded to recruit a bri-overseer left the plantation, for some purpose, announcing that he would return that ight. He failed to appear at nightfall; but ittle was thought of it, as he occasionally absented himself from the plantation for a day or two at a time. His continued absence throughout the following day alarmed the neighborhood, and a search for the missing man was at once instituted, suspicion at once pointing to the belief that Johnson had been foully dealt with. But who were his murderers, and where tions were discussed by the searching parties. No one doubted that the fugitive negroes were the authors of the crime, although nothing had been heard of their being anywhere in the neighborhood. The woods were scoured in every direction for days; but to no purpose. No traces could be discovered of the missing man, nor of his supposed murderers.

Thus the matter stood until about ten days ago, when the mystery was solved by the merest accident. A planter, who lives in the neighborhood, was aroused from sleep one night by the sound of voices near his premses. At once conjecturing that the owners of the voices were members of some of the prowling bands of thieving negroes, who confine themselves to the darkest recesses of the woods by day, and make marauding excursions to the plantations by night, he arose, seized his rifle, and stealthily emerged from the house. His movements were not observed by the negroes, one of whom, more daring than the rest, had advanced to paring quarters for the winter, and it is within a few feet of where the gentleman was concealed. AN INDIAN'S GIFT TO CHRIST-In a por tion of the Southern territory from which the red man has now been driven. I once attended a large protracted meeting, held in the wide forest. The theme on which the preacher dwelt, and which he illustrated with surpassing beauty and grandeur, was "Christ and him crucified." He spoke of Lucinda Fears and others, Defendants. the good Shepherd, who came into the world to seek and to save the lost. He told how this Savior met the rude buffetings of the heartless soldiers. He drew a picture of Gethsemane and the unbefriended Savior who wept there. He pointed to him DAY OF FEBRUARY NEXT, for settlement the heartless soldiers. He drew a pictas he hung bleeding upon the cross.

The white man told him Jesus could not accept those gifts. "Me give Jesus my dog, my rifle, and my blanket; poor Indian; he got no more to give—he give Jesus all." The minister replied that Light Brown, Christ could not accept them. The poor, Christ could not accept them. The poor, ignorant, but generous child of the forest bent his head in sorrow and meditation. He raised his noble brow once more, and fixed his eye on the preacher, while he sobbed out, "here is poor Indian; will Jesus have him?" An Important Matter.

The question of making some provision for the benefit of claims of citizens of Kentucky growing out of this war has already been brought before the Legislature, but no definite action has been taken.

It is a matter of vast importance to a large portion of the people of this State whose losses and necessities call loudly for some relief, and we hope that some measures may be devised for their benefit. Their property has been taken, and used in the Federal and State service, and every one will recognize the justice of a claim for compensation in every such case. But the question arises how, when, and by whom they are to be paid ?

It is not expected that either the Federal Government or the State, should pay for the ordinary and inevitable losses which have been subtained by the people; but it is right and proper that one or the other should pay for property which has been taken by our armies, and actually used in the public ser vice. The people should be compensated to some extent for damages sustained to their property by the action of our armies.

Not one-tenth of the property taken, and damage done, has been paid for; nor have proper vouchers been given for one-third. In many instances receipts and vouchers not worth the paper they are written on, until some provision is made to meet the
